CROWDS in their hundreds revelled in the fifth annual international music festival at Linton.

The event, organised by volunteers, went off like a huge party with everyone enjoying a lively and friendly atmosphere over the mid-summer weekend.

Fleetwood Mac tribute band, Rumours, pulled in a capacity audience on Friday evening. Saturday was kick-started by The Matt Schofield Trio, which set the mood for a great day. Big Joe Louis gave a resounding performance with the audience irresistibly moving with the music. Dana Gillespie maintained the party spirit and bill-topper Texas-born Sherman Robinson took the stage and pulled out all the stops.

A young band from Banbury – Ricochet – stole the show on Sunday afternoon with a thundering performance of classic rock. Wrapping up the weekend was the superb American guitarist and showman, Lightnin' Willie who played blues with a hint of country.

The festival is a non-profit making event which this year year raised £4,000 for local charities.
